Rescue Intellitech Appoints New CEO for North America

Brian Lisankie to Lead Strategic Growth and Operations in the Region, Bringing Decades of Leadership Experience to the Role.

Manassas, Virginia, June 9, 2025 – RESCUE Intellitech AB is proud to announce that Brian Lisankie has been appointed CEO of the company's US subsidiary, RESCUE Intellitech Inc. In this new role, Lisankie will be responsible for leadership of company operations throughout North America.

Lisankie was formerly President of Aimpoint Inc, a related company within the Sandberg Development group, from 2005–2024. He brings extensive management experience from prominent companies, including CamelBak, Emergency Products International Corp, Smith & Wesson, Spalding Sports Worldwide, and General Electric Credit Corp.

"We are very pleased to have Brian Lisankie join us to run our North American business as we continue to grow within the fire safety segment and continue to expand company sales into several new markets as well." said Martin Valfridsson, CEO of Rescue Intellitech AB.

"With decades of shared experience, we know Brian Lisankie's exceptional senior management skills and deep industry expertise. His experience building a larger company within our Group positions him perfectly for this new growth journey." said Stefan Persson, president and CEO of Sandberg development Group.

With a commitment to reducing long-term health risks like cancer among firefighters and hazardous materials professionals, Rescue Intellitech develops solutions that make it easier to care for the gear that keeps them safe. Every innovation is driven by one purpose: to create safer working conditions and support a healthier, longer career for those on the front lines. Production takes place in both Sweden and the United States.

RESCUE Intellitech provides a complete suite of protective gear maintenance products including the acclaimed Solo Rescue® decon washer for SCBA equipment, protective helmets, and gloves, washer-extractors for decontamination of bunker gear, and drying cabinets for gentle and energy-efficient drying of personal protective equipment.

"I'm excited to join a company with such a solid foundation and so well positioned for growth. Our decontamination equipment has a tremendous impact on people's lives – it feels incredibly rewarding to work with products that directly enhance people's health and safety. I'm eager to leverage my experience to help expand the company's reach.” said Brian Lisankie, CEO of Rescue Intellitech Inc.

About Rescue Intellitech
